- What does it feel like when your hand won't write what your brain is telling it to?
- How do you focus on a task when you can't tune out the noise around you?

ABOUT SAGE SCHOOL

Since 2009, Sage School has helped children in grades K-8 with dyslexia rediscover their confidence as learners. With a 6:1 student-to-teacher ratio, every child receives close, individualized instruction rooted in the Orton-Gillingham approach — a proven, multisensory method for teaching reading, writing, and language. Rooted in a Christian faith foundation, Sage helps students recognize their strengths and grow in confidence both in and out of the classroom. Most students return to a traditional school setting within two to four years, ready and confident.
